Margulies & Associates Announces Completion of Unique Workspace Design for athenahealth Corporate Headquarters in Watertown, MA

Boston, MA--Margulies & Associates, a Boston-based architecture and interior design firm, today announced that the firm, in conjunction with Byron Bell, AIA of New York, has completed a paradigm-shifting architectural interior design for athenahealth's new 132,000 square foot corporate headquarters at The Arsenal on the Charles in Watertown, MA. The radial floor plan breaks with traditional design concepts, allowing the rapidly-growing company to be completely flexible in the reconfiguration of its workspace in response to changing business needs and work culture objectives.

Athenahealth's space at The Arsenal will include a flagship stand-alone 22,000 square foot building, as well as more than 110,000 square feet of former industrial space in the main building. The design highlights the visually intriguing qualities of the space (which include soaring ceilings, exposed structural elements and large amounts of natural light) while responding to athenahealth's unique business and cultural requirements.

"Athenahealth's business model is changing the way medical practices are reimbursed for their services, so it isn't surprising that this innovative company asked for innovative space to support its operations and future growth. It's been fascinating to work with a company that is revolutionizing an important part of the healthcare industry, and to create new kinds of spaces to support their work," comments Marc Margulies, AIA, principal of Margulies & Associates.

Upon completion of its new space, athenahealth will relocate from its current downtown Waltham offices in summer 2005. Columbia Construction Company of North Reading will provide construction management services, while Corporate Project Partners of Boston will provide project and relocation management services.
