

O'Neill and Associates Makes a Move, Thanks to Margulies & Associates

BOSTON, Mass. – May 15, 2006 – Margulies & Associates, one of Boston’s most innovative architectural and interior design firms, announced today that it had designed the new offices of O’Neill and Associates, a full-service government and public relations firm, at 31 New Chardon Street in Boston.

O’Neill and Associates purchased a three-story, 16,000 square foot building and the primary entrance was moved from New Chardon Street to Hawkins Street to make it ADA accessible. The new configuration allowed the former exterior plaza space to be included in the first floor conference center, designed to allow large client gatherings and political functions.

“We wanted to have our own building that reflected the unique and specialized nature of our business, and one that would accommodate the variety of requirements of our diverse client base. We’re delighted that our new home suits us so perfectly.” said Shelley McPhee, chief operating officer of O’Neill and Associates

“O’Neill and Associates has a long and highly respected reputation for thoughtful advocacy. We very much enjoyed working with them to create an office building that conveys the unique personality and culture of their firm,” Marc Margulies, AIA, principal of Margulies & Associates.

Intercontinental Real Estate of Boston is the developer and property manager for the building. SEi Consultants of Boston upgraded the 30-year-old HVAC system in the building and Walsh Brothers of Boston provided construction management services.
